Located on 60 acres the GE Medical Facility contains a 200,000 square foot training center, 50,000 square feet of office space and 72 condominiums. Operated by Marriott Corporation as short-term residences, the condominiums are home to trainees for two weeks to two months. Set in a serene pastoral setting, with lots of rolling hills and majestic trees, General Electric leases the entire facility from the original four partners who still own the land and buildings.

1996/1997

When General Electric comes knocking on a developer's door, it's serious business. For Richard Felker, his friend and partner Dennis Klein, and two other associates, the result of that knock was the GE Medical Training Center in Pewaukee, Wisconsin. The team of four partners located the property, handled all the zoning and development work, and designed and built the entire project, all to the precise specifications of General Electric.
